If you want to start an e-commerce business or add internet selling to your established company then a good website design is the first step. Moreover, you have to make a good choice because the success of your marketing depends on it.

You can compare a good and a bad website design to get an idea of what you need to ask for.

A bad website will lack detail and content, it will be set up in a confusing way and the user will not be able to travel through the pages easily. It will not work at turning visitors into customers. With it you will be hard pressed at making the people who visit your site want to buy anything. It will just be a waste of time and effort.

On the other hand, an outstanding page is active, clean and consistent with its style and details. Moreover, this type of page can drag your e-commerce to full blast.

Now, let us discuss the significance of each essential quality.

How Do Visitors Interact

Visitors will actively participate with the website if it is interactive. Examples of interactive features are games and chat rooms. Visitors are more likely to revisit your website if you help them to interact. This might be because you have offered them something which is entertaining, educational or useful.

Concentration on Details

Your website should have a consistency which can only be achieved through attention to detail. On the educational aspect, cognitive loading, sequencing of information, feedback and erroneous text must be avoided since they represent bad design.

On the technical aspect, broken links, poor navigation and inactive pointers are annoying. So if any of these are included in your design make sure that everything works well and that each page looks like it belongs on the website.

The Look Of The Website

You want your website to look good if nothing else. Hence; graphic user interface must not be overlooked. To give you a hint, do not use dull colours; avoid busy screens and the overuse of animations and graphics.

If you ignore these key points to good web design, your e-commerce business will have limited success.
